Terry Martin, Director of the Harvard Law Library and Professor of Law, will speak on Supporting Scholarship in the 21st Century

Harvard Law School's Islamic Legal Studies Program, established in 1991, is the precursor of the soon-to-be established Center for Islamic Legal Studies. Both institutions seek to advance knowledge and understanding of Islamic law.

The program is dedicated to achieving excellence in the study of Islamic law through objective and comparative methods. It fosters an atmosphere of open inquiry that embraces many perspectives, both Muslim and non-Muslim. It seeks to promote a deep appreciation of Islamic law as one of the world's major legal systems.

The main focus of work at the Program is on Islamic law in the contemporary world. This focus accommodates the many interests and disciplines that contribute to the study of Islamic law, including the study of its writings and history.

Speakers:

??Frank E. Vogel, Director, Islamic Legal Studies Program, "An Introduction to Law of the Islamic World"

??Peri Bearman, Associate Director, Islamic Legal Studies Program, "Scholarship on Islamic Law"

??Lesley M. Wilkins, Bibliographer for Law of the Islamic World, "Library Collections and Services"

4:30 p.m. Reception

8:00 p.m. Buses Depart for New Haven
